COURSE DESCRIPTION

In France, the past is always present. This class is designed to provide students with an understanding of the intellectual framework and historical references that inform the most volatile issues debated in France today. Thorough study of the history of Paris from political, economic, and social perspectives will equip the student to analyze and evaluate current issues and events from both the French and the American perspective.

Goals

The overriding aim of this course is to increase students' cultural sensitivity through an in-depth examination of the many layers that make up French history while at the same time exposing them to how this history shaped the physical city of Paris itself. Through comparative examination of current events in France and the US, the course also sensitizes them to differences in cultural norms. Lastly, the course seeks to increase students' understanding of how a nation's "eternal values and universal truths" develop in response to a people's particular historical experiences (e.g., the place of religion in the public sphere).

In order to meet the course objectives, the assigned readings and topics in the syllabus vary from year to year in order to align them with recent major events. Past units have included a variety of topics, such as:

- "The Veil"
- Health insurance as a social or a socialist program
- Presidents (use and extent of power/elections)
- Women in the public eye
- War and terrorism
- Income distribution and the human costs of urban development

In each unit, the current issue is paired with careful study of related moments in French history (e.g., Huguenots in the 16th c. with Muslims today; a president with Napoleon). By engaging in a dialogue with the past, students' understanding of present issues is enriched.

Readings are selected to expose students to the various ways history is/can be written. These include:

- First-hand accounts and editorials
- Essays by specialists in political, social, economic, and urban history
- Seminal texts of reference (e.g., "The Declaration of the Rights of Man and Citizen")

Learning Outcomes

The course also seeks to develop students' written and oral rhetorical skills as well as their analytical skills through the following activities and assignments:

- Class discussion on readings, in which close attention is paid to both style and the use of evidence to support an argument
- Through in-class analysis of things like political cartoons and the deciphering, during numerous "off-campus visits," of political messages embedded in the iconography of monuments' façades, students are presented techniques to read visual evidence
- Writing assignments in essay-format, which are evaluated in terms of students' ability to develop a thesis and support it with well-chosen evidence, as well as coherent organization and attention to style
- To heighten their visual sensitivity, a project that sends them to the Invalides in small groups is conceived as a photo-essay

The final exam tests students on their ability to compare a set of recent newspaper articles/editorials to explain the differences in American and French attitudes by providing the appropriate historical background.

Required texts:

Alistair Horne The Seven Ages of Paris.

Course Reader: All other readings listed are in the xeroxed reader.

The essays in the course reader are intended as springboards for both your written work and our class discussions. Make sure to set aside time to read and think about the issues they raise.

Class requirements:

Your grade will be based on the following elements:

Editorials (2)	40% (rewrites encouraged)
Invalides "scavenger hunt"	20%
Class Participation	10%
Final Exam	30%

The Editorials are 5-7 page essays, typed and double-spaced. They should absolutely NOT be a dry summary of "then we did this, then we saw that." Nor should you try to cover everything.

Pick an overarching theme -- zero in on a topic -- which will allow you to integrate multiple aspects of our readings and discussions with your own observations of Paris (incl. on our group visits) during the previous two weeks. You might start from those subjects suggested in italics in the syllabus, a cartoon caption, a line from one of the readings... see if you can use and make the connections between multiple sources: readings, visits, and your life.

Be creative! Comparison between France and other countries is welcome. Your work will be evaluated in terms of cohesiveness, logic, and originality. There are many avenues you can choose...feel free to discuss your ideas with me before or after any class. You might consider showing me your outline before you start writing. Once you find a title, you are on the way to the essay.

The essays are due, at the latest, on:

1st: June 28 / 2nd: July 19 (but if you are inspired, please hand them in early!)

Note: proofreading of your printed work is required! (10% of the grade for any essay). I will stay at the center after class on those days should you need time to look over your print-out. Catch all the typos and grammatical errors you can and correct by hand! Pristine printouts larded with sloppy mistakes automatically lose points i.e. the essay which repeatedly described “plagues” rather than “plaques.” Written work, no matter how incisive and original, that is filled with these kinds of mistakes is guaranteed not to receive an “A.” However, I would be glad to work with you on improving your writing style or overcoming difficulties with grammar. (A summary of frequent errors, easily fixed, may be found in the reader).

A Note on Plagiarism: Plagiarism is a serious offense and could result in your dismissal from the program. All instances of suspected plagiarism will be reported to EAP for disciplinary action. If you borrow words or an idea from any source, whether it be a book, journal, magazine, the Internet, or a lecture, you need to indicate where the information came from. Diana Hacker’s A Writer’s Reference identifies three different acts that are considered plagiarism: “(1) failing to cite quotations and borrowed ideas, (2) failing to enclose borrowed language in quotation marks, and (3) failing to put summaries and paraphrases [of other texts] into your own words” (Hacker 261). (By both citing the source of this definition of plagiarism and by “enclosing borrowed language in quotation marks,” this syllabus has avoided charges of plagiarism.) If you have any questions regarding plagiarism, please ask me.

The Invalides “Scavenger Hunt” group project [2 or 3 people] sends you on your own to one of the most symbolic sites in Paris armed with a questionnaire [to be distributed in class]. L’Eglise de la dôme is open 7/7 from 10am to 7pm. One person should be the designated photographer/sketch artist and another armed with a French-English dictionary. This project requires that you open your eyes, then discuss and coordinate your findings with your partner/s, divide up the writing sections and proofread each other’s work. The photo-essay is due on July 12.

Class Participation is required both in the classroom and on all of our group visits. As per the UC Paris Attendance Policy, excessive absences and tardies will result in a lowered final grade. Please refer to UC Paris Academic Handbook for the policy on absences and tardies. You must do the reading and be prepared to contribute to class discussion. Chattering or spacing out on a site visit is noticed and will affect your grade.

The Final Exam will be held in class on July 28. Prepared, but not open book, with the understanding that this demands preparation and thought on your part. One week in advance, you will be given a dossier of articles to analyze in a comprehensive essay.

A Note on Electronic Devices

As a courtesy to your instructor and fellow students, please do not use cell phones, laptops, tablets, e-readers, or other electronic devices during class, even to check the time. Make sure phones are turned off. Use of these devices will lower your participation grade. No recording (audio or visual) of class sessions will be permitted.
